

Report: A Discussion on U.S. – China Environmental Technology Trade and Cooperation

Washington D.C. | The conference on U.S. – China Environmental Technology Trade and Cooperation was held on October 9th, 2015 at Foley & Lardner LLP in Washington, D.C. The event was co-sponsored by the International Fund for China's Environment (IFCE) and the Center for US-China Technology, Innovation and Development (UCTID). Hosted by River (Qu) Duan, the president of UCTID, the conference invited Mr. Jun Yang, CEO of China Tech-Bank and Helen Yang, general manager of China Tech-Bank as speakers and representatives from Embassy of P.R.China, U.S Environmental Protection Agency, World Bank, environmental technology companies, urban planning institutes and law firms. The speakers and guests had a conversation regarding U.S. – China environmental technology market and collaboration opportunities.

Jun Yang introduced the background and technology demand of the China Tech-Bank. China Tech-Bank, a Shanghai-based organization that mainly engaged in environmental protection activities, green technology investment and new product development, is seeking opportunities in overseas expansion and technological cooperation with the support from Shanghai Jiading and Tsinghua Entrepreneur & Executive Club. The conference has successfully built up the bridge of cooperation between China and the United States in environmental technology communications. After the conference, guests expressed that they have gained further understanding in China-U.S. marketing trend and future development of environmental technologies. With the help of China Tech-Bank, The representatives from the United States hope to strengthen the technology bond with China through China Tech-Bank and make joint effort on bilateral development of the environmental industry between the two nations.

Qu Duan, President of UCTID, delivered opening remarks

Dr. Ping He, President of IFCE, introduced IFCE events in environmental technology communication

Counselor Bin Li from Chinese Embassy Department of Economics emphasized on the significance of environmental technology exchange between United States and China

Secretary Ping Zhong from Chinese Embassy Department of Science and Technology introduced the development of environmental cooperation between United States and China

Mr. Jun Yang, President of China Tech-Bank, introduced history and background of China Tech-Bank.

Helen Yang, General Manager of China Tech-bank, expressed strong intention for cooperation with U.S. companies

Participants of this Meeting